TEXT A

US TEEN BRINGS SUNSHINE TO SOUTH AFRICA
1	A South African novel inspired a 13-year-old American to raise R656 000 to buy 560 wheelchairs for disabled people in Durban, Johannesburg and Cape Town. Young Harrison Hochman admits he knew "very little" about South Africa – until he read Beverly Naidoo's 80-page book, Journey to Jo'burg: A South African Story .	5
2	"I learned about the hardship, poverty and obstacles faced by many in South Africa. The book really moved me and opened my eyes to a world that I had not experienced in Southern California," he said.
3	The book, which was published in 1999, is about a 13-year-old girl, Naledi, and her younger brother, Tiro, who leave their village and walk 300 kilometres to Johannesburg to find their mother after their baby sister, Dineo, becomes ill.	10
4	Harrison lives in a different world from Naledi's: he attends the elite Brentwood School in Los Angeles, and lives in Brentwood, which is full of mansions owned by celebrities such as actors Jim Carrey, Harrison Ford and Antonio Banderas. But the teenager was so moved by the book that he spent six months raising money for his project. He knocked on the doors of his wealthy neighbours and quickly raised about R328 000. In an e-mail interview Harrison said he had collected money from some celebrities, but refused to name them. He simply said: "People were extraordinarily generous and I was able to raise all the money."	15 20
5	He said his parents and their friends were so impressed that they doubled his cash to R656 000. Then Harrison roped in the Rotary Wheelchair Foundation and the American Wheelchair Mission to help buy the wheelchairs at discount prices and organise freight containers to ship the consignment to South Africa. According to the Wheelchair Mission, the chairs, which sell for about R4 100 each, were bought in bulk for about R1 230 each.	25
6	Harrison and his parents, lawyers Nathan and Valerie, his brother, Tyler, and sister, Brynn, personally delivered the wheelchairs to some of the lucky and overwhelmed beneficiaries around South Africa. Their journey took in the townships of Empangeni in KwaZulu-Natal and Khayelitsha in the Western Cape. "When I presented the people with the wheelchairs, it made me want to do more for them," said Harrison. "I realised that the experience of helping people actually makes my life better and more meaningful."	30
7	Harrison's father said he and his wife were "blessed to have a child who really understands, at a young age, that he has an obligation and responsibility to care for others".	35

8	Cape Town Rotarian, Rodney Mazinter, who accompanied the Hochmans around South Africa, said: "To see the joy on the faces of the recipients was so heart-warming." Most had been forced to remain in bed "and had not seen sunshine in months," he said. The Jewish Care Cape charity described Harrison's feat as "unbelievable". Director Philip Todres said: "You are talking about giving people mobility; what better gift could there be for them?" American Wheelchair Mission director, Chris Lewis, the son of legendary US entertainer Jerry Lewis, said he was amazed by Harrison. "He wanted everyone to understand that a young person can change people's lives too if they try. Our world would benefit greatly from more young people thinking the way Harrison does."	40
9	One of the recipients who made an impression on Harrison was a 19-year-old from Empangeni whom the American did not name. "He only spoke two words to me, 'Hallelujah' and 'Yay'. He had a huge smile on his face," Harrison said.	45

TEXT CSTEPS TO A STRESS-FREE EXAM

Exam time can bring out the worst in most of us. Cramming three months' work into your already overworked brain will seem like an impossible task, but it can be done if you know what to do.

Your brain needs time to allow information to sink in, so allow yourself enough time to study. Make sure that you plan well so that you will also have enough time to take breaks and revise. Trying to guess what questions will or will not appear in the exam is extremely dangerous. All the odds are against you. Instead of not studying everything, rather try to study as much as possible. If the anxiety brought on by 'so much to study, so little time' becomes too much for you, try to lower your stress levels by taking a natural vitamin supplement and exercising regularly.

Even if you believe yourself to be good at multi-tasking, it is not a good idea to listen to music while studying. Remove your mp3 player, sound system or cellphone from your view altogether: you do not need distractions while trying to focus.

You might appear a little crazy, but studying out loud is a great way to remember your work. Studies have shown that reading out loud helps improve memory and knowledge retention. Another helpful technique is dividing your work into smaller and more manageable sections. It is easier to study four smaller sections in sessions of one hour each, than studying one large section for four hours.

As a lack of sleep can result in poor memory, it is important to get between seven and nine hours of sleep before an exam. If you plan to get up early to revise, go to bed early.

With the right techniques, you can conquer the exam ghost and head in the right direction.

QUESTION 5: LANGUAGE AND EDITING SKILLS

- 5.1 Read the following passage (TEXT F), which contains some deliberate errors, and answer the set questions.

TEXT FWHY KINDNESS IS GOOD FOR YOU

- | | | |
|---|--|----|
| 1 | The idea of a universal bond of sharing connects all humanity – ubuntu – is as old as the hills in black South African culture. | |
| 2 | Imagine, for a minute, a world were everyone is just a little kinder. When you are trying to merge into traffic, someone let's you in. At the supermarket, you allow a person in a hurry to go ahead of you in the checkout queue. You get back to your car and find someone have put money in the parking meter. A new theory called 'survival of the nicest' says that because of kindness, the human race prospered as a species. | 5 |
| 3 | Kindness is good for you in other ways. Studies have found that helpful people are less likely to fall ill from chronic disease and tend to have better immune systems. 'A strong correlation exists between the well-being, happiness and health of people who are kind,' wrote Professor Stephen Post. | 10 |
| 4 | Kindness has another simalarity with happiness: it cannot be bought. Kindness, then, is just a matter of choice. It is an attitude you carry with you that can make a difference, however small, in someone's life. | 15 |
